being now larger distributors of Dry Goods than any concern in this section, are in a position to buy to better advantage than others, and have resolved to use that advantage to still further extend their business by giving the public the full benefit of their increased facilities. In the coming Fall season they will be able to show large stocks of high class foreign goods, their importation orders being placed some months ago, and they will be prepared to offer these and the best of American manufactures at prices that can only be made by buyers able to go to first hands. During August the remainder of their summer stock will be closed out at any prices. however low, that may be found necessary to effect the end. As the stock is well known to contain no inferior nor deceptive goods, the bargains obtained during this closing out process are genuine bargains that give lasting satisfaction to purchasers. In taking inventory last week a number of very important reductions were made in the silk department, particulars of which can be learned at this store.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY CARRINGTON & CO., o. 400 State Street, Courier Building JOHN B. CARBINGTON.

DWARD T. CARBINGTON. JOHN B. CARRINGTON, J. Thursday Morning, August 10, 1882.

Few sessions of Congress have been held hat were so short and so wise that the people were not glad to see them end. The session which has just ended was one of the longest which has ever been held, and also very unsatisfactory in other respects. And yet it does not deserve the wholesale condemnation which it is receiving from those who are seeking to make party capital out of its shortcomings.

It is perhaps not too much to say that nore laws of national importance have been nacted during this session than in any session during the last ten years. Among them are the anti Chinese act, the act for extending the charters of the national banks, the act to establish a tariff commission, the act epportioning representatives among the States, the act providing for the distribution of the remainder of the Geneva award, the Utah polygamy act, the act for the protection of immigrants, and the army and navy appropriation acts, with their provisions for compulsory retirement and reorganization. It is true that much has been left undon which ought to have been done. Among the desirable measures that were not passed was the bankrupt bill, the bill to restrict the coinage of silver, a civil service reform bill, the electoral count bill, the Japan indemnity bill, the bill to refer private claims pending before Congress to the court of claims, a bill to reduce taxation, and a bill to regulate intertate commerce upon railroads.

But the chief cause for criticism is the nanner in which the public funds have been dealt with. The total of appropriations exseeds $294,000,000, a vast sum, and about $78,000,000 more than the sum of all the appropriations of last year. Concerning this should in fairness be said that nearly fortyeight millions of the increase was appropriated for pensions under the requirements of the arrears act. This is in addition to the sum necessary for the regular quarterly pay ments, which make the whole sum appropriated for pensions this year $116,000,000. The law providing for these arrearages was ssed by a former Congress; it could not be repealed without manifest injustice, and measures have been taken to protect the reasury against fraud. Twenty-six millions also are required to make up deficiencies caused by pretended Democratic economy last year. The River and Harbor bill is the only item of the appropriations in which extravagance can be justly charged. Republican extravagance is not more de ensible than Democratic extravagance, but considering the record of the Democratic party the attacks which its organs are now making upon the Republican party are decidedly "cheeky." The Democrats spent the public money with reckless freedom when they had a chance. Under the last four years of Democratic administration the expenditures of the government exceeded its the receipts of the government have exceeded its expenditures by the vast amount of $679,-

The Herald says made (by Mr. Moen of Washburn & Moen) to the Uxbridge spendthrift are not of the nature of blackmail. Any conjecture to that effect and no doubt there are some such in circulation, is supremely silly. It is inconsistent with all the known facts in the case, and not less so with the character of the gentleman from whom Wilson's fortune is derived. A man who suffers himself to be two miles from the village, while they were blackmailed, whatever else may be true of him, is weak and foolish, and Mr. Moen is neither. We have not been admitted to his confidence, but we have learned, on authority that seems to deserve respect, that the payments made to Wilson have been made in pursuance of a private agreement; that a full equivalent has been received for them, and that the agreement as originally made has not yet been completely executed, but will be, in good faith, in accordance with its terms. We are aware that this statement falls far short of satisfying public curiosity, but it is the best we have, and we see no immediate prospect of obtaining any better.

> SPREADING THE NEWS. The fashionable crowd at Bar Harbor was thunderstruck at the news, when Mr. How and his party came dashing down from the mountain with the tidings. Every town on the island was telegraphed to and telegrams were sent to many large towns along the sea-board and the main railway lines. Hundreds of men, with guns, pistols and every weapon they could lay hands upon, set out in companies and scoured the forests in all directions. Many of the guests armed them selves with revolvers and started in pursuit on horseback. Steam launches and small boats guarded every avenue of escape water Every steamer that left was oblig d to show up its passengers. It was all it

Death not Universal.

Forms of Life That are Immortal. [From the Jouenal of Science.] Whatever lives, we hear it said, whether plant or animal, must sooner or later die. It will, therefore, greatly shock many per-sons to learn that this is not strictly the case. We wish here to give room for no misunder standing, and, if possible, for no intentional misinterpretation. All animals may die, but death is not in all departments of the animal kingdom an inherent absolute necessity. On ter, and while there is (thanks to the care it is, though common enough, merely casual, divisions of the animal world, the Protozog and foresight of the Water company) still the result of some accident. s that parent? If living, let it be shown; if dead, where are its remains? No organicor indeed any other—matter was separated out when the two beings took their rise. All the substance of the body of the original Protozoon is included, and equally included, in the bodies of two individuals before us. Thus we see that the essential ideas of the life of the higher animals—birth, growth, maturity, parentage, brotherhood, term of life and successive generations—have, if applied to these humble and minute being simply no meaning. The process of reproduction, or rather multiplication, must, as far as we can see, be repeated in the same manner forever.

Accidents excepted, they are immortal; and dividuals whom they strike might, or rather would like the rest of their community, have gone on living and splitting themselves up forever. It is strange, when examining cer-tain infusoria under the microscope, to con-sider that these frail and tiny beings were living, not potentially in their ancestors, but really in their own persons, perhaps, in the Laurentian epoch!

This consideration opens up another queson. These beings are not wholly unconscious. They experience and retain im-sions, however dimly and in however limited a sphere. But when the splitting up of one individual into two distinct personalities takes place, as we have described above, we have then the curious phenomenon of two distinct and equal beings whose past life is one, who will remember the same incidents and the same reactions to which such inci dents have given rise. Here again is a phemenon which we cannot realize-two con temporary and coequal beings, possessing to a certain point at least, a commor cal life. Let us for a moment suppos the propagation of the higher animals place in a similar manner. We should soe, ϵ , g, the mature man split up into two equal and similar men, each remembering. knowing, believing and feeling, up to the day of fis-ion, all that the other remembered, knew, believed or felt; each, too, it migh be contended by moralists, equally sharing the merits or demerits of the antecedent form and each at a loss to say when his own
